ABOUT THE SESSION

In today's global landscape, sustainable economic development and rural empowerment have become paramount. The concept of bioeconomy, which emphasizes the sustainable use of biological resources to create economic value, offers a promising avenue for achieving these goals. Moreover, rural entrepreneurship plays a pivotal role in harnessing the potential of bioeconomy in rural areas.

This session will explore the intersection of bioeconomy and rural entrepreneurship, delving into innovative strategies, best practices, and emerging trends. We will discuss how bio-based industries can stimulate economic growth, promote job creation, and enhance the overall well-being of rural communities. The session will also investigate policy frameworks, technological advancements, and case studies that demonstrate the tangible benefits of bioeconomy in fostering rural entrepreneurship.

Join us for this enlightening session on the transformative potential of bioeconomy in revitalizing rural economies and fostering sustainable development, with talks by various eminent speakers and paper presentations by students/young researchers.
